Intercultural Theology, Migration and Global Cooperation (ITMGC)

The degree programme in 'Intercultural Theology, Migration and Global Cooperation' is intended to enable people of different origins and Christian denominational or other religious backgrounds to engage in cooperation work, dialogue and mutual integration, as well to engage in a critical and constructive appraisal of one’s own identity and cultural/religious background.

The students acquire academic and vocationally-oriented knowledge and skills in a) intercultural theology and hermeneutics, b) church work in an intercultural and migration-related context, c) global cooperation in a church, ecumenical and inter-religious context and in d) leadership, organisation and project management within churches and religious NGOs.

This study programme, which is focused on the cross- and intercultural dimension of Christianity throughout all modules, incorporates theological and cultural-hermeneutic questions as interdisciplinary issues and hence enables the development of theological, interreligious and cross-cultural leadership and organisation competency. Graduates of this study programme are familiar with the main contents and characteristics of various forms of Christianity, their theologies and also other religious traditions. They are able to communicate these issues in a materially correct and methodically appropriate form and hence can lead and organise intercultural exchange and cooperation across the boundaries of churches and other religious communities.

A practical semester working in a church or other religious organisation is an integral part of the study programme. The study programme is taught in English.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Introduction to intercultural theology', students acquire basic knowledge in the following areas:

- theological concepts and approaches in history and the present day
- biblical studies and traditions of interpretation
- theological terminologies
- development and relevance of the subject Intercultural Theology
- Mission Studies, Intercultural Theology and its relationship with Religious Studies
- mission and constructions of religious identity in historical and contemporary perspective
- the importance of stimuli from Africa, Asia and Latin America for Ecumenism in Europe and Germany.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- development of a problem awareness for intercultural theological discourses
- reading and interpretation of primary source texts
- acceptance of and appropriate responses to feedback in conversation with fellow students
- evaluation of their own personal skills and requirements for future academic learning
- orientation in the basic categories of academic theology
- understanding biblical and source texts against a background of historical-critical interpretation
- theological positioning of tenets of faith within an overall system of Christian belief.
Module Description

This module provides a general introduction to the classic subjects within academic theology and conveys basic knowledge of various theological disciplines, whereby the main focus is placed on the tradition of biblical exegesis and the doctrines of Christian faith. Debates and topics within the subject of 'Intercultural Theology' are presented against this background.

In this respect, a particular emphasis is placed on African, Asian and Latin American positions. The relationship with Mission Studies and Religious Studies is also established in this context.

The introductory lecture cum seminar 'Tenets of the Christian doctrine from an intercultural perspective' reflects on fundamental issues from prolegomena to eschatology, with due consideration of the church and modern society. The module therefore offers a foundation for other theological modules in the two B.A. degree courses at FIT.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Introduction to academic work', students acquire basic knowledge in the following areas:
- Characteristics and principles of academic work,
- Fundamental ethical standards for academic integrity and a Code of Conduct for good academic practice,
- Methodological principles of academic work (in particular the techniques of reading and writing academic texts),
- Other techniques within academic work: literary research, preparing bibliographies, etc.
- Academic communication and language (oral and written),
- Introduction to the preparation and writing of academic papers etc.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:
- Locating and evaluating specific topics,
- Systematic reading of texts for critical inquiry and discussion,
- Reading of primary and secondary sources,
- Correct and critical approach to textual sources and a critical appraisal of the credibility of sources.
- Basic rules and methods for preparing academic papers
– Preparing verbal presentations, position papers / hand-outs, brief essays etc., in accordance with academic standards.

Module Description

Academic work presents significant challenges to fresh students. This applies in equal measure to an academically profound degree course in theology as it does to the areas of social work, international social-diocesan work and development studies. In this respect, the module provides an introduction, overview, the right set of tools and significant opportunity to practice and to engage in collegial criticism. The module also addresses ethical standards and conventions within academic practice. The students are enabled to apply a systematic and critical approach to managing the flood of information and to conduct methodical literary research into a specific issue. They are also taught practical methods of correct citation, paraphrasing and the preparation of bibliographies. Moreover, the students acquire an exemplary understanding of how to develop, plan and complete an academic paper (in this case initially of a limited scope). Smaller assignments are provided as opportunities to learn based on clearly defined issues. Here, reading techniques and writing in clear and comprehensible language are important elements of the module.

- Examination form / duration (required for the award of credits): Written Assignment (Essay)
- Teaching and study methods:
  - Lecture
  - Seminar
  - Tutorial / Exercise
- Module coordinator: Kunz-Lübcke

Prerequisite for admission to the examination:
- Regular participation in the seminars and tutorials,
- (if applicable) two presentations on the basis of the essay in progress

Qualification Aims

In this module, students acquire the following knowledge:

- Intercultural relationships in Israel and early Christianity
- Their influence on the individual books of the Bible
- Biblical debate on the issue of migration
- Various process of religious group and identity-formation in Israel and early Christianity.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Critical appraisal of the realities of life among migrants, viewed especially from a historical standpoint
- Appreciation of the phenomenon of 'migration' within theological debate
- Reflection on the situation of migrants against the background of biblical statements
- Comprehension of this content viewed in light of its historical background
- Critical reading of bible texts and other sources.
Module Description

The module 'Migration and interculturality in the Bible' mainly explores the issues of migration and interculturality in biblical Israel and early Christianity. The aim is to demonstrate that ethnic, i.e. religious groups do not lead isolated lives, and that instead they exist in a context of mutual cultural exchange with their neighbouring cultures. The students should be enabled to analyse the relevant texts and hence to sharpen their awareness for the issue of 'migration and identity' from a biblical perspective.

The compulsory course uses biblical texts to demonstrate that the literature of Israel and early Christianity has experienced a multi-faceted cross-cultural influence. Moreover, the students discuss to which extent forms of religious and ethnic marginalisation and exclusion can be found in both sections of the Bible. The educational objective of the lecture course is to reconstruct the processes of the Hebrew Bible and the New Testament's literary emergence such that the manifold intercultural influences and cross-fertilisation may be illuminated.

The compulsory-elective courses should allow students to acquire knowledge in the area of migration and identity from a biblical perspective. This initially involves intense appraisal of the issue of migration within the Hebrew Bible. The manner in which 'strangers' are dealt with is indicated based on narrative discourse on prominent biblical figures associated with the issue of migration. For instance, the stories of Joseph, Ruth, Esther, Daniel and others will be used as examples to discuss which forms of literary processing and reappraisal are evoked by life in the diaspora.

A thorough analysis will be conducted on the issue of 'group formation and identity' based on the example of post-exile texts. Here, the aim is to indicate that Israel cannot be appraised as a homogeneous entity, in particular in the period following exile. The objective of the seminar is to demonstrate that a social and religious differentiation can be proven for Jewish society.

This differentiation will be emphasised for early Christianity and various theological movements using the example of the manifold relationships between Jewish and Gentile Christian communities.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Theological Ethics and Anthropology', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- The term, purpose and delimitation of ethics,
- foundation of ethics and methodologies within ethics,
- axiomatic and hermeneutic decisions of principle within ethical models,
- basics of ethical-cultural judgement,
- tenets of theological and biblical ethics,
- theological-biblical anthropology,
- ethics and the global debate on justice,
- the idea and understanding of humanity from the perspective of theological anthropology,
- current debates on human dignity and living with disability,
- principles defined in the emergent Ethics of Care,
− fields of ethical and anthropological conflict based on different cultural and hermeneutic access points.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

− Recognising the interactions between anthropological and ethical principles,
− take up an academically reflected position in the area of theological anthropology and ethics,
− allowing the insight acquired in the module to bear fruit in the development of personal, professional ethics,
− development of personal, reflected ethical principles and adoption of a stance in discussions within pastoral, diaconal and leadership work,
− critical reflection on areas of ethical conflict from an intercultural and theological perspective.

Module Description

The module ‘Theological ethics and anthropology’ provides a foundation for more advanced discussions on basic principles of socio-ethics in relevant modules held in the following semester. It provides an introduction to the history, establishment and on judgements within general and theological ethics and outlines the underlying positions within theological anthropology.

A compulsory lecture, ‘Introduction to general and theological ethics and ethical judgement’ defines the object of ethics, traces the history and establishment of general and theological ethics and uses examples to outline the process of ethical judgement. The students learn to handle terms such as ethics with confidence and to distinguish various ethical principles. After an introduction to general ethics, theological hermeneutics and premises of ethical discourse, the lecture outlines theological anthropology, using examples from biblical and related texts to elucidate the principles.

In the compulsory optional area, students can either place their focus on ethical questions in the field of social-diaconal work or on issues of global ethics.

The compulsory optional seminar ‘Anthropology and ethics in socio-diaconal fields of action' addresses fundamental ethical questions, among them living with disability, inclusion, justice within access and participation, human dignity and care models, as well as ethical questions within a context of development cooperation.

The compulsory optional seminar 'Ethics in a globalised world' offers students the opportunity to address broad-based issues of global ethics and to acquire initial understanding of fundamental aspects within intercultural ethics.

Qualification Aims

Students in this module acquire knowledge of the intercultural and inter-religious reception of prominent biblical figures, above all in the following areas:

- Methodical knowledge in the analysis of various texts and text types
- Knowledge of the intercultural reception of biblical issues such as creation, the image of man, the perception of state and dominion
- Knowledge of the perception and interpretation of biblical figures outside of Christianity.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Critical appraisal of gender issues in Old and New Testament texts
- The understanding of, and ability to introduce to debate, textual exegesis in various contexts
- The ability to reflect on the transformation of biblical figures in non-Christian contexts.
Module Description

The module 'Intercultural reception of biblical issues and figures' focuses on the reception and appraisal of biblical issues and figures inside and outside of Christianity. The initial focus will be placed on central biblical themes. Moreover, the reception and influence of individual biblical figures in the world religions will be demonstrated and discussed.

The compulsory course 'Intercultural reception of biblical issues' indicates and discusses biblical themes and guiding principles in the various forms of their reception. This will focus on biblical dogmas of creation, the image of man, the perception of state and dominion and suchlike. An overview will be conveyed of the historical and contemporary discussion of relevant issues within their various religious and cultural contexts. The course will also present and discuss the respective perceptions of humanity and their significance for issues such as gender equality, sexuality, anthropology and suchlike.

The Compulsory-elective courses will explore prominent biblical figures such as Abraham, Moses and Jesus, as well as individual female figures, in relation to their promulgation in non-Christian literary contexts and traditions. A second focus of the module will be on the analysis and reception of biblical figures and themes in various religious and cultural contexts. Here, a particular focus will be placed on the reception of biblical figures in Muslim traditions and in the contexts of Africa.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Migration in an interdisciplinary perspective', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- History of migration, especially immigration to, and emigration from, Germany
- Overview of theories and access points for the issue of migration in various perspectives
- Implications of migration and globalisation for selected religious communities and traditions
- Theories concerning the globalisation of religions and concepts of diaspora studies
- Theological approaches and reflections
- Overview of migration and counselling organisations.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Analysis of source texts within historical migration contexts against the backdrop of various theological approaches
- Empirical perception of, and reflection on, the connection between migration processes and religious diversification in the present day.
- Identification and analysis of challenges and requirements for religious communities in the context with migration and globalisation
- Demonstration of possible courses of action and counselling strategies.
Module Description

Transnational migratory movements have become one of today's key issues. Some estimates suggest that around 200 million people are affected. New forms of transport and communication set modern migratory movements apart from their previous manifestations. While migration in the past has frequently been arduous and irreversible, modern migrants move back and forth and are engaged in their new and in their old home countries. Migration has become a fluid process of transnational relationships.

These processes are addressed in a number of disciplines, and a new area of research has evolved within migration and religion as well. The module conveys knowledge in the history of migratory movements by means of various disciplinary access points and theories. In particular, it addresses the challenges and requirements placed in religious communities and indicates their possible courses of action and counselling strategies.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Leadership, Organisation and Work', students acquire basic knowledge in the following areas:

- History and development of the New Testament perception of office from the Early Church to the onset of the post-apostolic epoch (basic principles)
- Development of the perception of office and leadership in various Christian denominations to the present day (basic principles)
- Foundations and current practice in regard to the legal and organisational constitution of churches, religious communities, NGOs and faith based organisations (FBOs) in Germany and worldwide
- Changes in socio-religious forms and organisation structures over the course of time and under the impact of globalisation, migration and diaspora, as well as their implications for ecumenical cooperation in Germany and worldwide
- Leadership and organisation in religious contexts within inter-religious reflection.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Classification and critical categorisation of the understanding of office within one’s own denomination as part of the overall ecclesiastic tradition
- Recognition of, and response to, different forms of religious leadership
- Reflection on, and questioning of, one’s own leadership conduct in light of biblical and social models of church leadership and against the background of pastoral leadership concepts
- The ability to appreciate and discuss the practice of leadership in churches and other religious organisations with a view to inter-religious cooperation.

Module Description

The module 'Leadership, Organisation and Work' conveys to students advanced knowledge in the areas of leadership and organisation development within churches, religious communities and institutional fields of work. The module focuses on leadership responsibility in churches and congregations, as well as in NGOs/FBOs.

The compulsory lecture course 'Leadership in churches and congregations' teaches students the theological, legal and practical principles of church leadership. Viewed against a historical background, the second phase analyses and discusses the transformation of institutional organisation within Christian communities, churches and their leadership concepts in a context with migration and diaspora. This element includes case studies by students, as well as reflecting their own leadership conduct. A tutorial and exercise session on the practice of spiritual leadership and shared responsibility (liturgical and homiletic) is an optional addition to this lecture.

The first compulsory seminar in 'Legal forms and organisation of religious communities and FBOs' analyses various – mainly Christian – communities and FBOs in regard to their legal structure and organisational development. Moreover, case studies are used in an attempt to critically appraise the underlying principles for the (fictive) founding of a new community and, last, to analyse existing FBOs in regard to their legal and organisational forms.

The second compulsory seminar 'Religious organisations and leadership from an interreligious perspective' builds on the first seminar to illuminate forms and examples of religious self-organisation and leadership structures in various religious communities and (inter-)religious FBOs, especially in the non-Christian sector. Moreover, the social and organisational transformation of religious communities is analysed in a context with migration and diaspora, and the consequences for practical work in and with these communities are discussed based on selected case studies.

Qualification Aims

In this module, students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Models for the classification of state power and religion in the history of Christianity
- From the tolerated minority to the constitutional religion – the transformation of Christianity under Constantine
- The ‘kingdom of god’ and the ‘earthly kingdom’ (Augustine)
- Theocracy in Byzantine, Ottonic and papal provinces
- The tenets of the Reformation
- The meaning and significance of separating church and the state in modern secular societies
- Allocation of church duties and state tasks
- The struggle of the church in confrontation with state ideologies
- Interaction between mission and colonialism, i.e. European imperialism
- History of Christianity in Africa, Asia and Latin America
- Church and theology in the 'global South'.
Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- To appreciate and describe their own position in a democratic society
- To perceive and assess challenges of political responsibility from a Christian perspective
- To understand and outline their own interaction processes in a secular society.

Module Description

The module 'Intercultural history of Christianity' traces the history of Christianity from the perspective of Christian religion and secular rule. Various models of classification are identified and discussed as textbook cases in the lecture 'Church, mission and state in various contexts'. This outline focuses on the western European history of Christianity from the early Middle Ages to the modern era. The seminar 'Mission history as a narrative of interaction' explores the interaction between European, African, Asian and Latin American manifestations of Christianity.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Introduction to religions and inter-religious discourse processes', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Basic knowledge of the history of religions as well as the practice of faith in selected religious communities or other groups (Judaism, Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism, new religious movements, 'traditional' religious communities, etc.)
- Concepts of mutual inter-religious perceptions in different religions and traditions of faith
- Interreligious relations in historical and contemporary perspective
- Theologies of dialogue and other approaches to dialogue

In the compulsory optional courses, students acquire the following knowledge:

- Different Approaches to inter-religious dialogue from the disciplinary perspective of Religious Studies and Theology
- Approaches and Methods of Religious Studies and Cultural Studies
- Forms, contexts and conditions of inter-religious dialogue in Germany and worldwide
- Practical fields and examples of organised inter-religious dialogue.
Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Perceiving and strengthening traditions of multi-religious cohabitation
- Academic reflection of the management of religious diversity in a pluralist society, and creation of personal skills and competencies for action
- Critical reflection of inter-religious relations, especially within one’s own community of faith
- Critical analysis of, and possibly active participation in, inter-religious dialogue
- Respectful presentation of one's own beliefs in dealings with others
- Perception and respect of different beliefs and convictions, identification of shared concerns.

Module Description

The new and varied presence of religious groups with very different cultural and religious appreciations is emerging as globalisation unfolds. While European countries are increasingly becoming highly diversified and multi-religious societies in which new forms of handling this diversity still remain to be found, other regional contexts have preserved centuries of well-established traditions of multi-religious cohabitation that are undergoing fundamental transformation in the current, religiously determined conflicts. Against this background, the module, taught as a cross-module for both B.A. programmes together, conveys insight and skills in the handling of diversity in religiously plural societies and in managing organised inter-religious dialogue.

The lecture initially provides an introduction to selected religious traditions and focuses on inter-religious relations and processes of exchange and how religious communities perceive other religious. The compulsory optional seminars investigate the current contexts and conditions of organised inter-religious dialogue, how it is analysed in terms of religious studies and methodology, as well as various religious or theological approaches to dialogue activities. Moreover, the forms and practices of inter-religious dialogue and the different tasks in pastoral and leadership work as well as in diaconal or developmental work are discussed on the basis of selected examples.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Introduction to the long-term internship', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Procedure, structure, requirements and objectives of the long-term internship
- Processes to prepare for the long-term internship
- Analysis of individual strengths/weaknesses/needs
- Use of internet platforms for applications
- National and international application standards
- Application processes in the areas of global ecumenical cooperation, in international church contexts and FBOs
- Application strategies and self-presentation.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Realistic appraisal of personal strengths and weaknesses
- Analysis of self and external perceptions of strengths and weaknesses
- Investigation of practical fields that match personal strengths/weaknesses or profiles and learning needs
- Ability to define personal motivation in an application setting
- Ability to word a curriculum vitae and application letter in a formally correct and appealing style
Module Description

The module takes place in the form of a seminar, providing information on key aspects of the subsequent practical semester and elucidating procedures, frameworks and objectives.

In another seminar, the students receive support in the search for an individually suitable internship based on examples and an analysis of strengths/weaknesses and needs; moreover, they receive insight into the profile of requirements for the downstream preparation of an extensive internship report and an introduction to Internet-based research for employment and internship positions, as well as assistance in preparing a personal letter of motivation and a curriculum vitae.

The students are familiarised with the particular features of applications in the ecclesiastic-social and development policy sector and through role play receive the opportunity to practice a variety of application settings, which they then analyse in group processes.

Literature

In addition, internal university documents are used as work materials, including the regulations for the practical semester, workflows and information packages for mentors.

Qualification Aims

In this module, students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- History and phenomenology of the most important Christian denomination families
- The correlations of their central biblical and theological constitutions
- Ecclesiological moments of foundation
- Office and institution: Approaches in various denominations
- Spirit and charisma: Approaches in various denominations
- Social contexts of Christian social structures

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Appreciation and description of one's own denominational identity
- Understanding perception of other denominational identities
- Statement of viewpoints for dialogue.
The module 'Christian denominations' initially outlines the broad field of Christian denominational groups as an overview and then presents various families: Orthodox churches, Catholic churches, Protestant churches, Pentecostal churches and the charismatic movement. The comparative benchmark of this presentation is the various perceptions of receiving salvation in a formal and material context.

Compulsory-elective courses allow students to acquire advanced knowledge of individual denominational families.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Counselling', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Historical overview and theology of pastoral care and counselling
- Basics of pastoral care and counselling based on Christian anthropology
- Foundations of pastoral care and practical counselling from an intercultural perspective
- Methods of pastoral care and practical counselling from an intercultural perspective
- Communication and culture
- Different forms of counselling
- Migration and migration-related, psycho-social challenges.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Critical evaluation of pastoral and counselling concepts in regard to their intercultural relevance
- Sharpening of communication skills, as well as self and external perception in and for the context of intercultural work
- Reflection on pastoral practice in supervised role play with small groups
− Formulation of a personal self-awareness as a pastoral counsellor and its biographical and cultural-theological conditionality.

Module Description

Migrants always face particular challenges, especially when they experience 'forced migration'. Here, questions of identity and belonging are just as important as the issue of handling foreignness, racist structures in the absorbing society or the management of traumatic experiences. This module addresses migration-related issues within pastoral care and leadership work, providing a differentiated appreciation of the migrant's situation in the first and in the following generations. Moreover, the module 'Counselling' provides an overview of, and allows students to reflect on, the history and theology of pastoral care and on various approaches within intercultural counselling, whereby it focuses not only on questions of cultural conditionality in perceptions and interpretations of the world, but also on forms and structures of communication, while equally addressing the issue of counselling and gender. In addition, students are familiarised with key aspects of intercultural counselling work and their methodical access points. The practical sessions also provide the opportunity to critically appraise one's fundamental self-perception as a counsellor and to experiment with diversity-sensitive forms of pastoral communication and counselling. The students are familiarised with various models of counselling in this respect.

Qualification Aims

In this module, students acquire knowledge in the following areas:

- Ethical foundations of the Hebrew Bible
- Ethical foundations of the New Testament
- Discourse on the issue of 'global justice' within social sciences and philosophy/theology
- Biblical principles of liberation theology
- Biblical principles in discourse on the issue of 'justice'
- Concepts of 'justice' in other religious traditions of the present day and inter-religious perspectives on justice and advocacy

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Discussion of the issue of social justice on an academically reflected biblical-theological basis
- Analysis of personal experiences of justice issues, i.e. self-perception
- The ability to appropriately discuss the issue of social justice with a due depth of cultural and inter-religious understanding, as well as within an interdisciplinary context
Module Description

In this module, students acquire knowledge within the theological guiding principle of 'social justice'. The components of the module comprise biblical ethics, and biblical, social sciences and theological debates on the issue of justice, as well as an advanced appraisal of biblical roots within liberation theology. In addition, the module provides inter-religious perspectives on the issue of justice, as well as insight into concepts of justice among religious communities.

The compulsory course presents and analyses the relevant texts within Biblical Ethics (Hebrew Bible and New Testament). It then discusses biblical statements on the themes of labour, sexuality, human dignity and suchlike. The social provisions in Israel, the prophetic social criticisms and the New Testament references to the issue are also addressed. A further study objective is to outline the socio-historical backgrounds to each of these aspects.

The Compulsory-elective courses present and critically appraise, among others, interdisciplinary and theological discourses on the topical groups of 'global justice' and 'North-South injustice'. The African and Asian positions are presented in particular. A further seminar attempts to define clearer theological statements on the issue of 'justice' in a biblical perspective. Besides discussing the concepts and perceptions of justice, the seminar addresses the biblical texts that from a current viewpoint are most suited to a profound discussion of the issue. Moreover, the seminar provides the opportunity to explore the various models of liberation theology in their biblical contexts and reasoning. Other compulsory optional seminars investigate social science and comparative access points to questions of justice in an inter-religious perspective, in which the theological, i.e. biblical issues are enlarged on within an interdisciplinary framework.

Qualification Aims

In the module '13 Project management', students acquire basic knowledge in the following areas:

- Particular characteristics of projects and project work
- Stages of the planning cycle: start phase, planning, implementation, monitoring/controlling, evaluation and their respective functions
- Planning tools: target definition, target system, situation analysis, resource and needs analysis, target group analysis, simple monitoring and evaluation tools
- Opportunities and limits of project-based intervention
- Underlying principles of working with the tools of the participatory learning and action approach (PLA), also its opportunities and limits
- Important stakeholders in projects (partners, sponsors, target groups, beneficiaries, etc.)
- Planning the end of projects and their follow-up.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Basic principles of planning approaches
- Teamwork: various roles and tasks in the team (coordination, monitoring/controlling, time management in the team)
Presentation and visualisation techniques, such as presentation cards and boards
- Documentation of project-related processes
- Contact with potential funding bodies or donor organisations (principles and strategies in applications for external funding).

Module Description

Project and project-related work are standard features of international development coordination. This applies increasingly also to the international cooperation between churches and faith-based organisations (FBO), as well as to social work, especially in the areas of migration and refugees. This module teaches the underlying theoretical and practical knowledge in these areas. It addresses intercultural issues in project-based work, analysing and critically appraising classic forms of PME, i.e. examining their limits. Students completing the 'Project management' module are given the opportunity to apply the knowledge acquired in theoretical units as part of a project developed individually or in a small group, and to put the project into practice, for instance in their local congregation or field of work. Here, the module offers continuous support as part of the process.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Global cooperation between churches and religious organisations', students acquire basic knowledge in the following areas:

- History, forms, content and levels of global, international and ecumenical cooperation
- Global cooperation among churches and faith based organisations from the perspective of organisation sociology
- Selected concepts and strategies in the institutional development from informal to formal networking, through to institutional forums, platforms or associations.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Investigation of, and reflection on, the objectives and particular characteristics of selected processes within international cooperation and faith based organisations (FBOs)
- Development of an understanding for the theological importance of global cooperation in churches and FBOs
- Development of an understanding for the social importance of global cooperation in churches and FBOs from a perspective of peace policies.
Module Description

The module 'Global cooperation in churches and religious organisations' addresses both the basic principles of how the ecumenical developed from the 19th century to the present day, i.e. its occasioning, meaning, interpretation and objectives, as well as the conditions for cooperation between churches or other religious organisations from a viewpoint of organisation sociology. The impetus of the 19th century missionary movement, the experience of two world wars in the 20th century, the challenges of global social inequality and poverty and clear demands for social justice and peace, were and remain today the main motivations for global cooperation between Christian churches and organisations. In an age of accelerated globalisation and migration, these issues have also led to a broadening of the scope of activity for the stakeholders involved. In order to understand these processes, students in this module are familiarised with ecumenical processes, objectives and actors. Moreover, the students acquire an understanding of research into the issue of institutional cooperation from the perspective of church history and organisation sociology, as well as strategic approaches.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Long-term internship', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Acquisition of specialist insight in a certain area of work through regular evaluation meetings with the respective mentor
- Familiarisation with their administration and specific contents and challenges, and development of the ability to reflect critically on one's own role with the help of supervision.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- To review the practicality of theoretical knowledge in the area of ecumenical or interreligious work, pastoral /leadership or congregational work, development cooperation or missionary work in a project accompanied by a specialist, preferably abroad,
- to apply the theoretical knowledge acquired and
- to experiment with intercultural skills,
- to practice in a recorded project initial responsibility for the planning, implementation, evaluation and documentation of projects.

Module Description

The educational content is defined more precisely in the internship agreement (“learning plan”) for the long-term internship; it may differ, depending on where the internship is completed and following preliminary arrangements between the student, the university and the internship provider.

Qualification Aims

In the module 'Evaluation of the practical semester', students acquire fundamental knowledge in the following areas:

- Basics and methods of collegial counselling
- Different perceptions of aid, development and development policies in the area of humanitarian aid/assistance, social-diaconal work, missionary or leadership work and development work
- Different perceptions of management and leadership work and cooperative, interreligious work
- Methods of evaluation
- Group moderation.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- Reflection on personal principles of leadership and management /cooperative work against the background of practical experience acquired
- Addressing self perceptions and external perceptions in groups during the long-term internship
- Reflection on intercultural encounters and conflicts and the personal role as an instructor or leader within the context of a religious institution, NGO or FBO
- Handling one’s own expectations and disappointments
Moderation of group processes in small groups or in a plenum
- Transferring the acquired competencies and experiences into a future professional setting.

Module Description

The block module 'Evaluation of the long-term internship', which is a compulsory module, gives students the opportunity to reflect on the experience they acquired in the long-term internship and to give and receive collegial advice within the framework of a feedback session and other opportunities. The main focus is placed on the critical reflection of one's own experience, role and self perceptions vis-à-vis external perceptions in religious, church or other international FBO settings.

At the same time, the block module provides the opportunity to accompany group processes after introduction and to practice moderation, feedback and evaluation techniques in small groups, also in a leadership role. The block module ends with a session in which the experience and skills acquired, the expectations, the understanding of roles, the guiding principles and the external perceptions are addressed in relation to a student's career choices.

Prerequisite for admission to the examination:

- regular participation in the seminars, tutorials, supervision

Teaching and study methods

- Seminar
- Tutorial /Exercise
- Courses taught in English

Module coordinator

Dean of Studies

Qualification Aims

At the end of the 5th semester, the students propose the subject, academic advisor and topic of their bachelor thesis. The research project, i.e. topic, is defined more clearly in a counselling process with the academic advisor. The seminar 'Tools and methods to prepare a major academic paper' repeats and enlarges on the knowledge and skills acquired in the field of academic work in semesters 1 to 5.

- Implementing and wording personal questions and experiences from the practical semester in meaningful academic topics and research projects
- Appropriately processing topics and questions through the use of proper methodology
- Selection and reception of relevant literature
- Assigning the project to sensible stages and presenting it in a meaningful form
- Discussing the project with the academic advisor/s involved and in presentations to fellow students, and defining its objectives in a clearer manner in response to collegial feedback
- Moderation and evaluation.

By completing the module, the students prove their ability to plan and to create a bachelor thesis on their selected topic or research project and to present their undertaking.

Module Description
The seminar 'Tools and methods to prepare a major academic paper' repeats and practices methods of research and presentation, tools and bibliographies, as well as academic work and presentation. Moreover, students learn how to present their project appropriately in an auditorium, to moderate the ensuing discussions and to exploit the collegial feedback they receive for their own work project.

Qualification Aims

In the B.A. thesis, students prove their ability:

- To implement and word personal questions and experiences from the practical semester in meaningful academic topics and research projects
- To create an academic paper within a logical structure and according to the latest academic standards
- To process the research topic using appropriate methodologies
- To select and receive relevant literature
- And to produce an academically comprehensible and profound result.

The details of its preparation, in particular the allotted time, are stated in the General Examination Regulations, in particular section 19.

By presenting and discussing their bachelor thesis at the subsequent colloquium, the students acquire fundamental knowledge and skills in the following areas:

- Analytic-summarised presentation of the topic or research project
- Presentation and visualisation of the results.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills:

- To focus the results and competencies acquired from the completion of the project, to analyse them in terms of their material and technical merits, and to present them in an analytic form
- To compare the insight acquired in other projects and to reflect and enlarge on their theory in discussion with the academic advisor
To transport the results and competencies from the project into a practical setting and to use the contacts and networks acquired for one's own practical work.

Module Description

In the bachelor thesis, students present a selected topic or small research project based on the knowledge and skills they acquired during the Study Programme. The students prove their ability to independently process, i.e. complete a topic or research project using academic methods and within a clearly defined period and to present the results in the form of a written paper. The insight acquired is then presented in a summarised form as part of a bachelor thesis colloquium.

Qualification Aims

In this module students prove their ability in:

- Presentation and visualisation of results of the Bachelor Thesis
- Basic methods and techniques of oral presentations.

Moreover, the students acquire the following skills,

- to reprocess the results of the B.A. thesis research according to the target audience
- to present the results in a given time frame
- to adequately engage in critical discussions and respond to feedback.

Module Description

The students present in a public colloquium the content and results of their Bachelor theses. They prove their ability to present complex content in an intelligible and subject-specific way. Moreover students acquire skills in engaging in critical conversations and in asking and responding to questions and further feedback in a fair and substantiated manner.
